

Casual Friday: Tariff Impact? + "Barndominiums" – March 7th, 2025

Tariff Impact? - Tariff implementation and negotiations spiked market volatility this week.

Economists have two hands for a reason! On one hand, if the administration negotiates better trade deals, this could be a tailwind for the US economy. On the other hand, while in place, the tariff crosscurrents will impact certain industries/companies more than others. The market is whipping back and forth.

Using Bloomberg analytics, Berkshire appears to have less aggregate tariff exposure than the market on average. We believe the portfolio has held up well through the volatility so far. Downside protection is a key tenant in Berkshire's process.

We are, however, measuring company exposure and will make changes as needed. We ask... is this a short-term earnings impact OR a long-term earnings impact and a change in the market's willingness to pay for long-term earnings / PE. We believe focusing on the latter is a more elevated approach. Still, the analytics we access are faster and more precise than ever, aiding in our long-term portfolio management decisions. (i.e. Bloomberg tariff tools)

Overall, we hope for a quick diplomatic resolution and solid improvement in trade. There certainly could be bumps along the way, but we'll stay consistent and thoughtful as we navigate.

Our steadfast approach focuses on committing to long-term holdings with a dividend and dividend growth component. In our opinion, this is an optimal way to build and maintain wealth. CNBC on dividend investing:

Digital Estate Plan!

“Historically, estate planning centered on tangible documentation – wills, account access, and critical information stored in safes or files, with clear instructions for heirs. However, as assets and personal information have become increasingly digitized and moved online, ensuring smooth access to digital accounts has become increasingly complicated. Digital assets range from email accounts and social media to online banking and cryptocurrency – essential elements of daily life that are often trapped behind passwords and authentication barriers. As a result, integrating digital assets into estate plans has become a crucial part of an advisor's process.”

'Garage Mahals' Are Driving Neighbors Nuts

"Call them car barns, barndominiums, toy sheds, garage mahals or shouses (for shop houses), they are a big hit in the Land of 10,000 Lakes."
